The suit sought a class-action judgment on behalf of every American who voted for President Trump, arguing that Trump's meeting with then-President-elect Vladimir Putin in January 2016 could be construed as an illegal interference in the U.S. presidential campaign. "Trump's conduct, defined by its necessary effect on the 2016 election, is unquestionably an interference with presidential elections, an activity on which the Constitution imposes a unique and unequivocal duty to the people," Judge William Alsup wrote in his 56-page ruling. He added, "The Electoral College cannot refuse to count the popular vote, and States may not refuse to tally their electors' votes." Trump did not meet with Putin during his inauguration weekend; however, he did have a brief meeting with him at Trump Tower. Many of the major news networks, such as ABC, NBC, CBS, and CNN, did not cover the meeting. It's unclear how Trump's meeting will affect the lawsuit. In the ruling, Alsup suggests that the suit could move forward, even though Trump may not have violated the Constitution, if the group who brought the suit argued that the Electoral College was under illegal "pressure from the President-elect and others." Trump has been repeatedly criticized for being too soft on Russia since taking office. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) called Trump out for his "

New Assignments Ada, the new role, is very happy and excited to be working with the new General Manager for the new Fleet. She's kept her previous assignments, but now she is serving new assignments. One of them requires taking a look at our people and their careers. Our people, unfortunately, are aging. The whole crew has changed in the last twenty years. Ada's assignment is to survey our people and see if there are any programs or job positions our people are well qualified for. Also, she is to recommend (if possible) some kind of upgraded, promotion, or new education requirements. A very intimidating task. I mean, how can you know what our people are qualified to do? They are all retired and have no continuing education. Yes, they are qualified to work on the computers, but that's all. However, Ada and I are determined to find a solution. To do this, we need to find the former employees' e-mails. So, as I am now Chief Communications Officer, it is my responsibility to handle the communications for all the people. So I can send one of the staff to retrieve the e-mails of those who have retired. I can also access the e-mail addresses of the four former managers and ask them for the e-mail addresses of the former employees. This way, we will have all the data available for the survey. I'm working on this right now, and, hopefully, have the survey completed by the end of the week. To me, it's a lot easier to go to the office and spend two hours pulling out boxes and boxes of paper files. However, I'm very proud of myself. I'm doing a much better job of organizing everything than I ever thought I would. Plus, I'm on the same team as Ada, which is very helpful. As I mentioned, the survey will take a few weeks. It's such a simple job, but many people are reluctant to do it because they are afraid they will face difficult questions. That's why it is so important to communicate with the employees. They don't know we are doing this, and when we are done, we want them to think, "Good. I'm glad you found out." Hopefully, they will ask us for more jobs. If we find that they have no one
