When a buddy signs on or off, there may be a popup/dialog asking you if you want to accept it. Some users might have difficulties recognizing those dialogs and dismissing them. With KEYMACRO you can set a shortcut for either of the following dialogs: 1) the OK button 2) the "No" button You just press that shortcut and you are informed that your buddy signed on/off.

This is a great tool for experienced users (the learning curve might be steep for a beginner) but it can also be very helpful for all users that have trouble dismissing those popup/dialogs. There are many other notification options available in KEYMACRO:

Show video notifications on webcam: You can now set your webcam to play a video when a user signs in. You can see a sample of this video here: Show video notification on phone: You can now set a video notification on your iPhone. This will appear on your iPhone and alert you when your buddy signs in. KEYMACRO can do all this without your buddy knowing. The video is streamed directly to your phone and can be uploaded to your YouTube account, if you so desire. Show windows: You can now set your windows to show a notification icon. When a buddy opens a window the icon will appear. This allows your buddy to access your windows right away. Show links: You can now set links to show a notification icon. When your buddy clicks on a link the icon will appear. For example if your buddy enters a web address in a chat window the link will show the web address. There is even a sample of this here: Show incoming file transfers: You can now set a transfer icon to appear in the tray when a file is transferred. This is the default icon for all transfers. If you delete this icon, you will no longer receive transfer notification events. You will still be able to receive message (for example via Twitter) that a file is transferred. Go to the project page for more information about KEYMACRO: Chromium has been updated, and has now it's version number bumped from 19 to 21.
