Do not publish this cracked file at .Buhari's Ethnic Politics is costing Nigeria - Edo State Edwin Obioha is a shrewd and experienced politician, a man with a big heart and one known for using money and power to succeed, a trait that clearly defines him as an opportunist. He knows the people very well and after beating the odds and being voted out of office in 2006, he came back to a position of power with the support of the people and his erstwhile opponents. In 2011, he was in prison because of a fraud allegation but did not spend any time there. That year he was elected as deputy governor of Delta State. However, in 2015, he was stripped off the position after being appointed to the Nnamdi Azikiwe University Teaching Hospital (NAUTH) as the Managing Director with the objective of cleaning up the institution. His move was resisted by the state government led by Godswill Akpabio. The governor and the staff of the hospital were outraged by the appointment. Akpabio, who had experienced his own problems with Obioha, was no longer afraid of him. The two fought off each other and Obioha was voted out of office as deputy governor. Obioha has now been appointed as the Commissioner of Police by President Muhammadu Buhari, a move which could spell doom for that great man who has been handed over the police helm in the state. Anybody who has ever dealt with policemen knows that they are difficult to manage and often cannot be trusted. Their salaries are not paid regularly, they are violent, they hunt for money and they engage in corruption. What will happen to Obioha if he does not get the support of the state government? If the minister of justice, Mr. Chris Ezuma, had his way, Obioha would be arrested, charged and jailed. Ezuma should be mindful that Obioha is someone who can easily be bribed into acting against him. He may not go to jail but he will end up being targeted for assassination. Politics is dangerous and easily leads to death and there is no escaping it. Obioha will die in Edo State and Nigeria if he does not find a way out of this situation which is very dangerous. The politicians in Edo State, including Akpabio and his deputy, Femi treated with cervix conization. The cases of 96 patients treated for carcinoma in situ (CIS) of the cervix (cervical intraepithelial neoplasia [CIN] of grades 1 and 2) by low-dose laser conization, were reviewed. Eighty-one patients were treated between 1978 and 1985 and 15 between 1986 and 1988. The average follow-up time was 3.3 years. There were 13 recurrences (14%) and four complications (4%). Of the 54 patients with grade 1 disease, 19 (35%) had recurrences, and all were successfully treated by repeat conization. All nine patients with grade 2 disease were successfully treated by conization alone. Six of nine patients who had early recurrence (within one year) of grade 2 disease were successfully treated by repeat conization. All patients with recurrence at three to five years of follow-up had grade 1 disease. Eight of nine patients with subsequent progressive lesions (grade 3 and 4) were successfully treated by conization. In one case of progressive disease (CIN 3) that required radiation therapy, the lesion recurred within six months, and two failed attempts at repeat conization. Of 11 patients with baseline grade 1 disease who had no recurrence for two to three years, six were reexamined within three years. In all, three additional patients were found to have grade 2 disease, and repeat conization was performed. All patients with advanced stage CIS have now been followed for more than two years (average four years). From six to eight (17%) of 41 patients had a persistent condyloma. Of these 17 patients, seven had a normal Pap smear in follow-up. One patient has had a negative smear after three years. From experience

Main menu Post navigation Oh, and by the way: This article is all about how all these companies have top notch development teams that are responsible for running actual projects they built over a period of years, while Google is still making excuses when it comes to Android. Make sure to read it to the end! @Chris: It's a common misconception that all apps for iOS and Android are developed in-house. In fact, Apple and Google have a contract with an outside contractor to do the development. When you make a comment like "Google throws money at their projects", it sounds like you're implying that Google has their own in-house development team. In fact, they don't. "Google throws money at their projects" refers to the company outsourcing the work, not the in-house development team. Hi. My name is Andrew, and I'm the Android platform technical lead. I would like to respond to Steve's original blog post. Steve's post states that Android "can't compete with Apple's pace". But it's completely unfair to compare Android's rate of development to that of Apple.
