Not for web vs. native mobile apps, but for any form of software? ===== eldavido I think the distinction is less clear than one might think. Some would say Linux and MySQL wouldn't be considered open-source, and we'd just say "ok, Java is proprietary". But even in those cases, Linux is a fairly open source project, and MySQL is semi-proprietary and maybe kind of free. That said, the rest of your question might be answered in this book, which seems to be a pretty clear comparison of the pros & cons: [security?rea...](~ ~ ~ slater Thanks for the link - I hadn't seen that one before (I had assumed it was a book about hardware hacking) and it makes a lot more sense.

1976 WCHA Men's Ice Hockey Tournament

The 1976 WCHA Men's Ice Hockey Tournament was the third conference tournament in the history of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, a now-defunct ice hockey league in the United States. It was held between March 3 and March 10, 1976, on the campus sites of the WCHA members. By winning the tournament, Michigan State received the Western Collegiate Hockey Association's automatic bid to the 1976 NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Tournament. Format The top four teams in the WCHA, based on conference regular season standings, qualified for the tournament. In the first round of the tournament, the third and fourth seeds and the second and fourth seeds played a two-game series with the winners advancing to the tournament championship game and the losers advancing to the third place game. The tournament champion received an automatic bid to the 1976 NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Tournament.

Trace-A-Loco! Learn If you have an application where you do not want to poll for location, you can use the LocationManager and LocationListener classes. If you have a long running application and you do not want to poll for location, you can use the LocationManager and LocationListener classes. The LocationListener interface is a good choice for such applications because it provides a number of services to the application including, stopping the listener, starting the listener, and moving the listener to a new location. You only need to implement the method `onLocationChanged(Location)` and have it return true. Your activity can simply keep checking the location every so often by calling `getLastKnownLocation()` or use whatever mechanism you require for polling. The usage of these classes will vary from application to application and is therefore difficult to explain in detail. For further clarification you may want to browse the `LocationManager` docs that can be found here. `Beginning With the LocationManager` The following snippets will cover the basics of getting a location, getting the last known location, and how to set the listener's location. The code for this application will be very similar to what we have seen in the past. First we will show the main class. The most important thing to notice is the calls to `Location.getLastLocation()` and `Location.requestLocationUpdates()`. This is where a lot of the functionality of using this API resides. You will also notice the cast of `getLastKnownLocation()` to `LocationListener`.

You need this so that you can use the methods defined in `LocationListener`. The first thing we will do is setup the location manager, which is passed to the function as an argument. The range is going to be limited to 10 meters. This is done in `onCreate()` //Update location listener - use only if you don't want to get location from the phone locationListener = new LocationListener() { // Update location
