I would like to be able to sort on the first column so it is in ascending order. But I also want to be able to keep unique entries on that column. For example, I have an integer id, a string user_name, and an integer group_id. I want to do something like this: select * from user order by user_name asc, id asc; This would have the effect of sorting the id in the same order as the user_name, but retaining the entry with the same user_name and id. A: If you have unique user_name in the column, you can sort by user_name in any order and you won't get any duplicate. A: Select unique values from a column in ORDER BY and then make a field out of it. Here is an example from the manual: SELECT DISTINCT ON (e1.unique_col) * FROM t1 e1 JOIN t2 e2 ON e1.unique_col = e2.unique_col ORDER BY 1; An unusual self-limited case of unilateral choroidal neovascular membrane secondary to rhegmatogenous retinal detachment. Secondary choroidal neovascularization (CNV) from choroidal lesions is rare. We report a self-limited unilateral CNV secondary to rhegmatogenous retinal detachment in a 27-year-old man. Although treatment was not required for this type of CNV, CNV remains a potential complication of retinal detachment. Therefore, a high index of suspicion should be maintained for any retinal detachment to detect this complication and institute appropriate treatment.Q: "dyld: Library not loaded: /usr/lib/libclang.7.dylib" error in cocoa app I'm currently running into the
